.1 Sponsored Links Report error Guarani script is an indigenous script in which indigenous South America languages are written. Guarani is one of the three native languages in the Pontic-Caspian Basin, the other two being Tupi and Arawakan. It is languages that live in the highlands of the upper Amazon. Guarani is considered the simplest of the three, as some writers have also called Arawakan. Of the approximately 10,000 indigenous languages spoken in the world today, Guarani is the third most numerous language group in South America. The language is spoken by approximately 1.5 million people (1.2% of the population of Paraguay). According to the Guarani family, there are about 1,500 speakers, but these figures have been disputed. The exact number is estimated at 1,300. The language is spoken in Paraguay, northern Argentina, the Brazilian states of Mato Grosso, Goiás, Minas Gerais, and São Paulo, the departments of Neembucú, San Pedro, and Paraguari in Paraguay, in the territory of Nandu Guazú in the Upper Ypiranga (Paraguay), and in the Moxos Department of Brazil. This shows that the language is not limited to a specific region. The language belongs to the Tupi group, together with Tupi-Guarani and the Tupi-Xavante languages. The exact origin of the Guarani language is disputed. Some consider it to be a mixture of the Tupi and Terena languages. Others see it as an indigenous language of Arawak origin. Some linguists have also connected it to the Xinguano language, although there is no linguistic evidence that connects it to the Xinguano language. The language is called Xinguano by the Guarani people, and it is of the same language family as the Xinguano languages, which are spoken in the northern part of the region, in the states of Mato Grosso and Rondônia. Most linguists consider Guarani a hybrid language. Others consider it to be a creole, which is a language that is formed by contact with a language 82157476af
